Dr. Terrel LeCesne, assistant superintendent of Romulus Public Schools addressed a distinguished group of family, friends and fellow citizens at the Dedication of the Lorena Garrett Burton Memorial Building on Saturday. Mrs. Burton's daughter Jacquelyn Hoye accepted a plaque in honor of her mother's achievements.

Dedication... Burton Memorial Building unveiled

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

An outstanding tribute that was long overdue according to Romulus Mayor Beverly McNally, occurred Saturday when the Lorena G. Burton Memorial Building on Wayne Road was dedicated.

More than 250 people attended the renaming and dedication of the former Beverly Elementary School, where, ironically, Mrs. Burton who died in 1974 at the age of 59, served as the first principal.

First was nothing new to Mrs. Burton who became the first black student, the first black teacher and the first black principal in the Romulus School System.

Mrs. Burton was born on the family farm in Wadley, Alabama in 1915. She was the sixth of 14 children and while her father barely finished eighth grade, four of his children completed college and three earned masters degrees.

"She left an indelible impression upon those who tried to follow in her footsteps," said Dr. Terrel LeCesne, assistant superintendent of Romulus schools.

"She became the foundation for which all other administrators were gauged," said LeCesne at the unveiling on Saturday.

"A good cross section of the community attended because she was so well respected," he added.

The theme for the program was, "A Vision Hindered, Not Lost." The renaming was initiated by Rev. Lovell Wooden several years earlier, and the members of the Romulus School Board unanimously adopted a resolution to change the name of the building.

After a brief ceremony a plaque was presented to Mrs. Burton's daughter, Jacquelyn Hoye. "The ceremony was very nice and the turnout was beautiful," said Mrs. Burton's sister, Ethel Lovette. "People in the community wanted the name changed. Rev. Wooden kept pluggin' till the school board agreed," she added.

"My father instilled in us the value of education. He bought the family's first car so his children could attend the local high school 12 miles from home. There were no school buses in those days.

"Although he didn't have a high school education, he read a lot. He was a very talented individual," she said.

As a young child, Mrs. Burton came to live with an aunt in Romulus where she attended local schools. She finished Phoenix High School while living with her brother in Hampton, Virginia. She then obtained a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Elementary Education from Hampton Institute and a Master of Arts Degree in Elementary Administration at the University of Michigan.

Her work in local education spanned almost three decades. After she left her post as principal in 1967, she became director of Wayne County Office of Economic Opportunity. Two years later, she became Director of State and Federal Programs in the Romulus School System. Mrs. Burton is also credited with bringing the

Lorena Garrett Burton (1915-1974)

Head Start Program to Michigan.

Mrs. Lovette recalled that her sister did not have much of a struggle as the community's first black teacher. "She just somehow proved her worth," she said.

Mrs. Burton was an outstanding community worker, a noteworthy educator who had deep religious roots. She joined the Methodist Church at an early age and she served on many school, civic and church committees. She was well known for her active participation in promoting educational opportunities for local youths.

LeCesne stated, "It is significant that this building is named in her honor. Family Neighborhood Services, Wayne Metropolitan Community Services and Focus Hope are the programs currently housed here. They emulate her philosophy of caring and sharing for the less fortunate."

One too many Two treasurers trouble council

Two Romulus Deputy Treasurers are not better than one. That's what the city personnel director is telling Romulus City Treasurer John Lewkowicz.

Personnel Director Marilyn Radford sent Lewkowicz a memo April 3 referring to regulations in the state law. "The city budget does not provide for more than one (1) Deputy."

The situation which prompted Radford's action began in January when the Deputy Treasurer Josephine Hagen began a medical leave for approximately 12 weeks.

Lewkowicz sent Radford a memo Jan. 12, stating that he was posting a temporary job opening for the position of deputy treasurer.

Shortly after that time Lynn Conway was hired to fill the position which she currently holds.

This past week, members of City Council met in an executive closed session to discuss among other things the two deputy treasurers.

The situation has been confused by the fact that Hagen has allegedly moved from Romulus. Lewkowicz stated that, "she has informed my that she has no desire or future plans to return to the position of deputy treasurer. Therefore, she has terminated her position as deputy treasurer for the city of Romulus."

Are there one too many deputy treasurers? City council members have decided to refer the matter to the city attorney. His opinion on the issue is expected to be submitted to the council later this month at which time, according to council members, appropriate action will be taken.

Brownies troop to Battle Creek

Romulus Brownie Troop 33 just got their feet in the door before Kellogg's of Battle Creek closed it.

Just two days before the official closing of the public tours at the Kellogg's factory, 11 local girls boarded a train for a visit to the land of snap, crackle and pop.

These first, second and third graders aggressively sold Girl Scout cookies and made a $474 profit, and their hard work earned them their trip.

"It was quite an enjoyable experience," said Debbie Haverlock, the Troop's leader. Her 9-year-old daughter, Elizabeth is a Brownie.

"I was a Brownie when I was a kid and I wanted to do so much with these kids. I had some insight into what Brownies were like and wanted them to enjoy as much as they could. When I started, we had only nine girls and now have 16. Five could not come on this trip.

"We've marched in the Belleville parade and visited the Pineknoll Nursing Home in Taylor at Christmastime where we sang carols. Normally, we meet every Tuesday."

Highlights of the trip included pictures in front of Tony the Tiger and a most memorable train ride. They had the whole first car to themselves. "They had the freedom to walk around. They weren't restricted," Haverlock said, who along with Janice Welt, the troop co-leader, managed the group on this excursion.

"This has been an experience they won't forget. In fact, for their last meeting before summer in May, the troop will recreate a skit of the tour and train experience. At that time they will have a pizza dinner for their parents. They will present in their own words and through their own eyes exactly what happened," Haverlock said.

Insurance rains on parade

No Fourth of July Parade down main street in Romulus this year? WHAT! "I can't remember when there wasn't one," said Mayor Bev McNally.

"Liability and insurance seem to be the problem," she said.

City Treasurer, Linda Choate said, "We have received a list of rules and regulations from our insurance company. Aside from several changes which must be made, the company has not notified the city of its insurance premium."

According to the parade organizer for the past several years, Gayle Mach, some of the proposed changes include; benches must be secure on the float, there can be no standing and nothing can be thrown from the floats.

"This is the first year we have had any restrictions aside from applying for the parade permit," she added. "Romulus has not had any incidents which would have initiated such actions."

Mach added that the Romulus Parade Committee will do whatever it takes to correct any problem. "We don't want to dampen the spirits," she said.

In years past children have brought large paper bags to collect the candy that was thrown to them from the passing floats. "It's just been a tradition," said Choate. "The kids line the curbs with great anticipation. It's a lot like Halloween."

"It has to do with risk management," said City Councilman, Noah Bergeron. "There was always the possibility of children running in the path of the float or someone being hit in the eye by a misguided piece of candy. Is the risk of an accident worth the ability to pay for each taxpayer, let's say, 5-mills for a $1 million lawsuit?"

"Sentiment is mixed about whether to have one or not," said McNally. "It may just be easier to provide an alternative activity. In years past, we followed the parade with a picnic. Maybe we should just concentrate on the picnic. The community had three parades last year: one during Michigan Week, the Fourth of July Parade and one at St. Aloysius Catholic Church. Attendance has not been the strongest at the Fourth of July Parade in recent years."

"If the parade is not going to be a success, I would rather put the energy into some other project," she said.

"We do have community involvement," replied Mach. "It's just great to see grandma, grandpa and the neighbors watch their favorite little Boy or Girl Scout march in the parade. Sometimes the Shriners, veterans and firefighters participate. There are antique cars, horses and local bands. We've organized the parades for so many years that we know exactly where everyone wants to be. The fire engines lead, and the Girl Scouts don't want to follow the horses. I wonder why?"

"Let's hear from the public," concluded McNally.

Send in the clowns

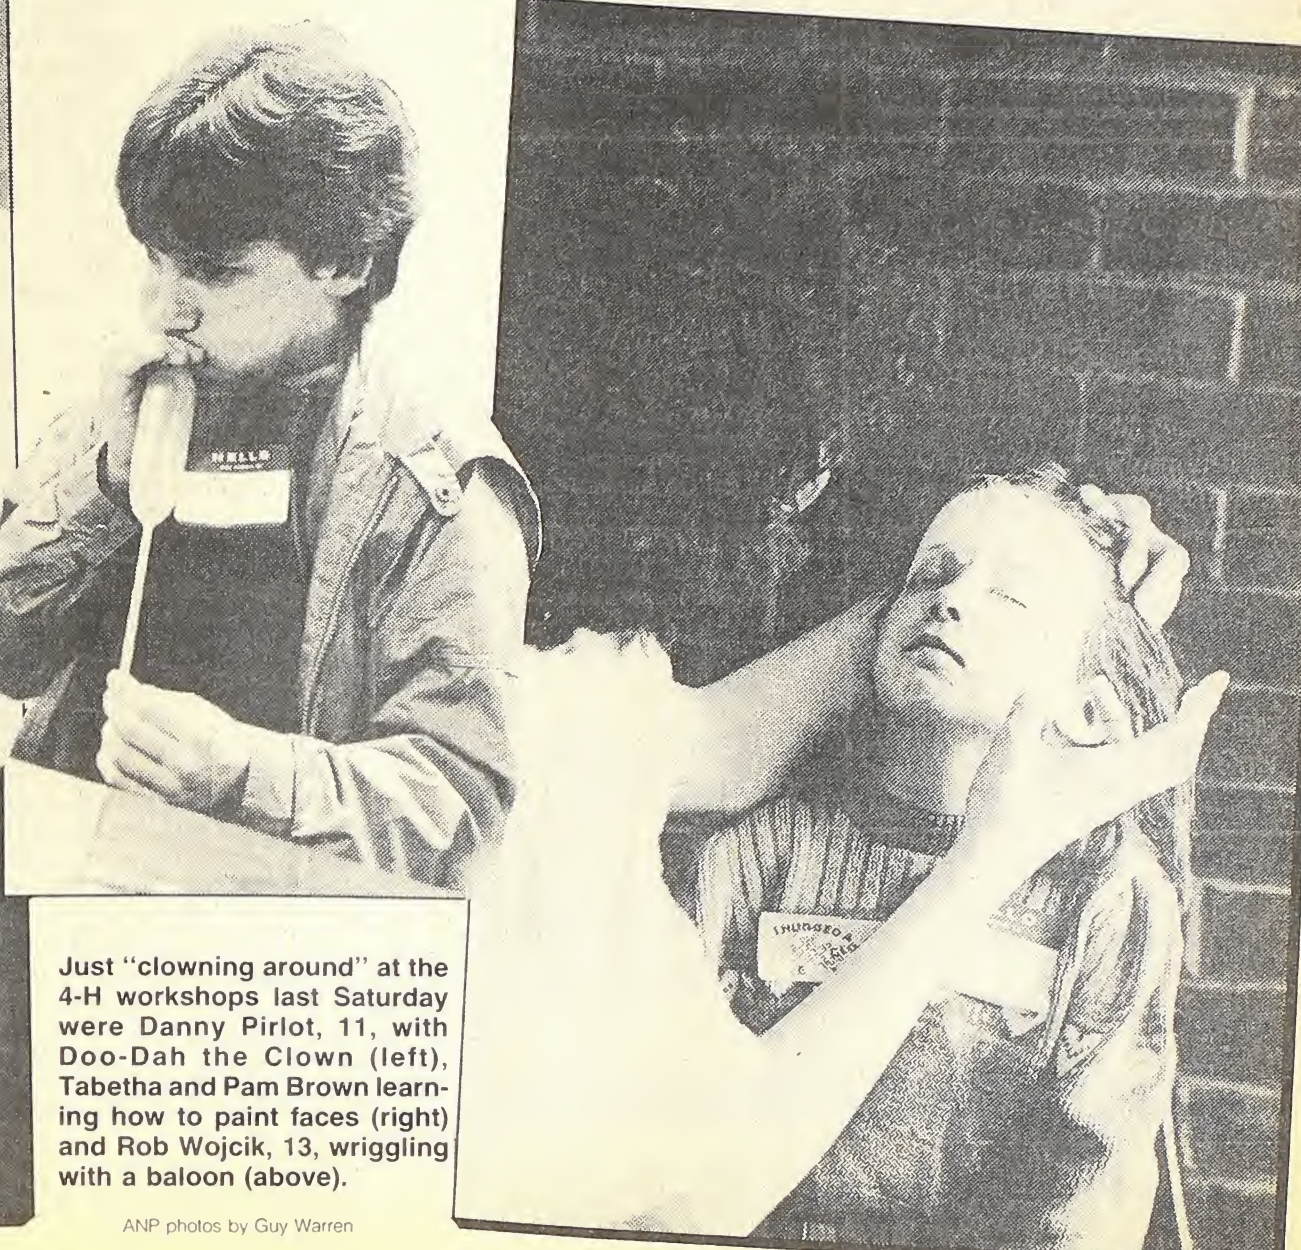

Most circus goers only can dream of life as a clown, underneath the bright red, button nose and the oversized outerwear of the loved creatures of the big top, but several western Wayne County residents participating in the Wayne County 4-H Clown Development Committee experienced clown life first hand.

"A Little Sunshine Workshop II" as clown life would dub it, attracted more than 25 youths at the Wayne County Extension and Education Center Saturday. Sponsored by the county 4-H program, the workshop offered clown enthusiasts the chance to learn and observe, question and admire and share with the laughter and merriment of the happy-faced souls of circus and county fair fame.

A variety of individual workshops provided students with hands-on experience in juggling, skits, balloon sculptures and mime, to name just a few. Would-be clowns learned how to paint faces, twist balloons into intricate shapes and designs, dance and laugh wildly.

The clown series was just one of a variety of courses offered at the Wayne County Extension Center and the 4-H program. Upcoming in the busy schedule of 4-H members is the annual county fair to be staged May 18 at the county fairgrounds just west of Belleville Road in Van Buren Township.

There some of the antics, pranks and cheery smiles learned by students in the clown development workshop may surface to enlighten the faces of the young and old alike.

TWO WESTLAND RESIDENTS, Corey Wofford and Tim Yales, and Livonia residents, Jun Aishima and Scott Westover, made up the MATHCOUNTS team from Frost Middle School of Livonia in the state Math Competition at Michigan State University April 12. The foursome took fourth place out of 25 teams. MATHCOUNTS is a national math competition sponsored by the Society of Professional Engineers for seventh- and eighth-graders.

County to vote again on commissioner

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Wayne County Commissioner Milton Mack was more optimistic this week that his second attempt to get a proposal approved that will eliminate the county drain commissioner's office will have more success than his first try last week. The commission resolution which calls for an amendment to the county charter to eliminate the drain commissioner failed last Tuesday when only five commission members voted in favor of the measure, three less than the needed eight-person majority vote.

Three commission members abstained from voting on the proposal including Kay Beard who represents Inkster and Garden City.

Beard defended her abstention saying that not enough information has been presented to the board in response to the alleged misuse of funds by current Drain Commissioner Charles Youngblood.

"I thought the vote was premature. We've got very serious charges against Commissioner Youngblood. We don't have to take action before 50 days before the election," Beard said. "We can't take a vote. There is still plenty of opportunity for us to act on that."

Beard questioned the constitutionality of the proposed constitutional amendment during a primary election. According to Beard, state statutes require such issues to appear before the voters in a general or special election. If the commission members pass the resolution to amend the constitution before their June 5 deadline, the issue would face the voters in the Aug. 5 primary election.

In addition to her fear that the move would be unconstitutional, Beard said that the charges against Youngblood should be based on more substantial evidence, evidence that she feels she has not yet been provided.

"He has been charged with some very serious things. I think we should bring him in. He has not been brought in to answer," Beard said. "I think we're being premature. I want to find out. I think I want to act responsibly. When very serious charges are made we want to find out what happens."

than a petition drive spearheaded by Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara. According to Mack, the sponsor of the county commission proposal, his resolution would eliminate the office completely re-assigning the various tasks to other county departments, namely the Department of Public Services.

The petition drive, however, seeks to change the post from an elected one to an appointed one, a move that Mack feels isn't enough in resolving the alleged abuse of funds and over-assessments the drain commission now has the power to control.

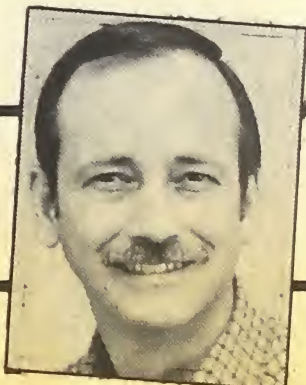

"The office of the drain commissioner is a complete, total waste," Mack said. "The drains need to be cleaned out but it won't be done at the prices now being charged by our drain commissioner."

News of the defeat of Mack's proposed resolution wasn't heralded locally as several western Wayne County cities and townships have adopted resolutions supporting the proposal to eliminate the office.

Wayne Mayor Patrick Norton called the lack of support for the measure irresponsible and urged area commission members to reconsider.

"I'm outraged at the lack of support from western Wayne County, especially from those who abstained who are from western Wayne County. This issue has been debated for years, the information is all before us," Norton said. "The office is designed to lead to abuse. When are the commissioners going to support all of western Wayne County on its issues?"

Despite initial defeat, Mack remained confident that an identical proposal the second time around would be passed later

dan's dogs by dan a. morris

Now that spring seems to have arrived, most of us will be cleaning off the picnic table for family gatherings and backyard barbecues.

As our dogs have a tendency to do, they will see if they can get away with that "Don't I appear undernourished and neglected" look, furrowing the forehead and waiting for the kind-hearted guest to toss a piece of steak in their direction.

An occasional bit of meat or goodie will not do any harm, of course, but keep in mind the dog will automatically assume this is okay everytime you have company.

This would be a good time to reinforce the poison-proofing exercise. Our dogs spend more time with us outdoors and may vacuum up that one thing in our yard that could end his life.

There are many beautiful but deadly plants which, if ingested, could kill or cause serious illness to our pet. The Department of Agriculture will gladly send you a listing of potentially dangerous houseplants and outside flowers. Many of these are common and popular plants all of us have around.

Squirrels, cute as they act, may carry rabies and if your dog is one of those who won't let well enough alone and is unfortunate enough to corner a squirrel, it is more than likely the dog will end up with a bite on the nose while Mr. Squirrel bounces away unharmed. If so, take your dog to the veterinarian right away. Rabies immunization or not, safeguard your dog by having your vet check out the bite.

Bee stings are a common summertime irritant and are painful to your dog. Pity the dog who snaps them up in his mouth. Not all bees expire immediately. Can you imagine a bee stinger in your own mouth?

Watch that your dogs don't sniff or lick the grass after applying fertilizers. Granted, we must let them outside to relieve themselves, but don't let your dog lay in freshly fertilized grass. He could burn his tummy from the substance and if he licks his feet when returning indoors, he will be licking toxic substances. An easy preventative is to wipe your dogs feet with a wet cloth and removing the fertilizer sticking there.

Summer is an enjoyable season for us as well as our dog. Have a safe one.

Pizza pizazz

God knows I've tried.

The purchase of a $30 ceramic baking stone helped. After that, the $19.95 short-handled pizza peel (the plywood board used to place and remove pizza from the oven) surely would have brought me to the ranks of a rookie.

Even a visit and class by Carl J. Oshinsky, the local pizza gourment, should have helped me bring my pizza from the depth of the one-step-above-Dominos rating my family usually gives.

Since it would be difficult to change my name this late in life, are there any Italian or Sicilian families out there who would like to adopt me? I'll do just about anything to learn how to make the perfect pizza! (My family suggested a $3.65 per hour job at the local Pizza Hut, but even those guys have $70,000 conveyor-belted ovens doing the job of what old Neapolitan ovens manufactured from Mt. Vesuvius volcanic rocks used to do.

By now, I'm sure that I have encountered the wrath of those Dominos and Pizza Hut supporters who swear by modern technology and $70, 000 conveyorbelted ovens.

I guess the old adage that food always tastes better when someone else does it lends true to my quest for the best pizza. I refuse to dispel any further information on where to purchase the best pizza in town. From this day forward, I will sift, roll, slice, dice, toss, slide, slither and bake until I achieve something close to what comes from Cecelia's in the Little Italy section in Boston. (Notice that I told where to purchase the best pizza

OUT OF TOWN, but not in!)

Needless to say, the best pizza begins with the freshest ingredients. I have really conflicting reports on the preparation of crusts, ranging from several days ahead of schedule to eight hours. In all honesty, I must vote for the crust made as fresh as possible. I have experimented with making the crust a day or two in advance and I can detect a strong taste of yeast the longer the crust sits. Most dough recipes seem to include the same ingredients. Their differences lie in the amounts used. Most pizza professionals will use a high-gluten flour for the lightest, crispiest results but I have seen recipes calling for rice flour and bread or all-purpose flour. There's no secret in the fact that any addition of water must have it between 105 and 115 degrees for the active proofing of the yeast. A healthy tablespoon of olive oil added to the dough will ensure a smooth coat. You can attempt making dough in a food processor but most of us will operate the processor far too long, therefore making a tough dough. Stop the machine immediately when the dough begins to form a ball and is swept from the sides of the workbowl. Hand kneading is best, but again can be overdone. Never exceed 10 minutes, usually not more than 6 to 7 if you are really getting into the process and taking out all your pent-up frustrations about making perfect pizza.

Personally speaking, I have found that for a thinner, crispier crust, make the dough a little drier. For a thicker, chewier crust, make the dough a little more moist and allow to rise 30 minutes before topping with ingredients and baking.

Speaking of toppings, it is a known fact that after shaping the dough, sprinkle a little cheese over the dough, then add the sauce and toppings. The fat in the cheese, when melted, will make for a firmer base and will help keep the toppings from sliding off when cut and picked up. Fresh, uncooked ingredients give pizzas the most pizzazz. Anything that exudes liquid should be dried before cooking, this will keep your toppings from floating off when cut. Foods that need to be moistened while cooking, like fish and onions, should be placed under tomatoes and sausage or pepperoni.

Mozzarella cheese is what gives pizza its characteristic long strands, but its rubbery texture can be modified by adding some Italian Fontina, bel paese or other good melting cheese.

When beginning the baking process and using a pizza stone, ceramic stone, quarry tiles or whatever, it is imperative that the stones be preheated first in a cold oven, then preheated up to 500 degrees. The best pizza temperature is one between 475 and 500 degrees. If the pizza has a tendency to brown or burn quickly, cover the top with an aluminum cake pan. (Those disposable ones are great.) This will enable you to continue the cooking of the crust without burning the toppings. When the pizza has been baked to perfection, remove from the oven and brush with olive oil and sprinkle with parmesan for the best taste ever. By the way, a sprinkling of cornmeal on the stone, peel and pans works wonders to keep the beauty from sticking.

Whatever your abilities, ethnic background or style, whether you prefer Little Ceasars over Dominos, (can I help it if the Tigers are more exciting than the Red Wings?) experiment and let me know your secrets for the best homemade pizza around. Drop me a note. . . (or better yet, send a sample) to this newspaper, I'll try it and let you know what I think.

DOUGH FOR 1 LARGE PIZZA (About 16 inches)

2 1/2 cups high gluten flour (all purpose may be used)
1 teaspoon salt
1 packet dry yeast
3/4 cup warm water (105-115 degrees F)
2 tablespoons olive oil

In a bowl, dissolve yeast in warm water. Add salt and have the flour to make a thick batter. Add olive oil and continue mixing while adding remaining flour to form a soft dough that will pull away from the sides of the bowl. Turn the dough onto a lightly floured surface and knead for 6-7 minutes. Place in a lightly greased bowl, cover and allow to rise for 1 1/2 hours. Punch down, let rise a second time for 2 hours. Place the risen dough on a lightly floured board, flatten dough and shape. Place on a cornmealed tile or pizza pan.

CLASSIC PIZZA SAUCE

1 large can (28 oz.) whole Italian tomatoes, seeded, drained
3 large cloves garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon basil
1 teaspoon oregano
1 teaspoon marjoram
1/2 teaspoon fresh ground black pepper

1/4 cup olive oil

Saute garlic in olive oil, but do not brown. Add remaining ingredients and stir well to break up tomatoes. Cook, uncovered to thicken for about 45 minutes over medium heat. Makes enough sauce for 3 pizzas.

Honor Thy Father and Thy Mother

Okay, so my dad taught me everything there is to know about food and restaurants. Can I help it if his taste for Jepeto's food lies somewhere between a box cake mix and his great dislike for mom's chili?

And mom.

First off mom, let's let the world know that you have enjoyed the best wet burrito in the world at the Beltline Bar in Grand Rapids. I mean, gee, what can you expect from a classy pizza joint in Garden City? And don't forget that I had to fight off your advancing spoon trying to get at my great tasting chicken noodle vegetable soup!

And can I help it if we tag along with grandma and grandpa and grandma's idea of a great night on the town is the buffet line at Sign of the Beefeater? I know she wanted fish and chips and our waitress told her they were only available on Fridays. But golly, she licked that plate of lasagne clean.

And remember the basket of fresh hot Jepeto stix? I had all I could do to get my hands on one when the four of you are grabbing and saying how good they are. Kinda like soft baked pizza crusts with a lightly seasoned parmesan cheese covering. The special cheese sauce was nothing to sneeze at but the bread sticks were so good they didn't need anything else.

And how about the pizza? We ordered the speciality of the house with pepperoni, ham, bacon, onions, mushrooms, green peppers and pepperoni. Although not on a par with Buddy's or Shields, it was mediocre at best. Dad said it was a little greasy and the bottom crust was not quite done.

I enjoyed our waitress, Tina, who brought me a placemat to color on and a whole box of crayons. She even brought me a free coke. I enjoyed her spunk and effervescence. Keep up that attitude Tina, we loved it!

On a recent visit, Dad and I tried their soup again. This time it was chicken noodle. Homemade, yes, loaded with great big kluski noodles but this time it was a tad too salty. The french fries were out of a prepared freezer bag but they were hot and we got a lot for 85 cents. The homemade onion rings were the hit of the afternoon though. Great batter Jepeta! Finally, something like a hoagie that came to the table baked and not from a microwave oven. One more reason why I love you, Jepeto!

The place is done up nicely in red, white and wood. A much homier touch from the starkness and darkness of the old Garden Cafe.

This would be a great place for the family to visit because there's a kids' menu and lots of food that is sure to please every one in the family. Dinners, sandwiches, munchies, pizza, salads, hoagies a little bit of everything. And the best part about it? After lunch or dinner, take a walk over to the pet store about 3 doors down and check out the monkeys, turtles, snakes, parrots, fish, dogs, cats, birds and everything else. Make sure you say "hi" to the big white parrot.

"GET TO US BEFORE WE GET TO YOU" is the new theme to several Amnesty Program posters now being displayed throughout Michigan. The signs were placed by the Michigan Treasury Department in hopes that local taxpayers will get all forms filed before the June 30 amnesty deadline. State Treasurer Robert Bowman said recently that "Those who owe taxes and don't take advantage of Amnesty will be facing stiff penalties and prosecution. Our new computer system . . . will enable us to identify and catch tax evaders." For more information, call 1-800-I.O. TAXES.

Learn not to burn
Tanning spa reaps new business harvest

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

The owner of Tanfastic Tanning Spa in Ypsilanti doesn't think the majority of southeastern Detroiters will be abandoning the beaches in the near future but, she does think that the boom in her new business symbolizes a new era in sun bathing.

Janis Riley has been operating her tanning spa on South Grove Road for almost one year now. If her daily business hours of 7 a.m. to midnight are any indication of the budding success of the operation, Riley would be the first to say that her decision to open the store and another in Saline were two of the best moves in her business career.

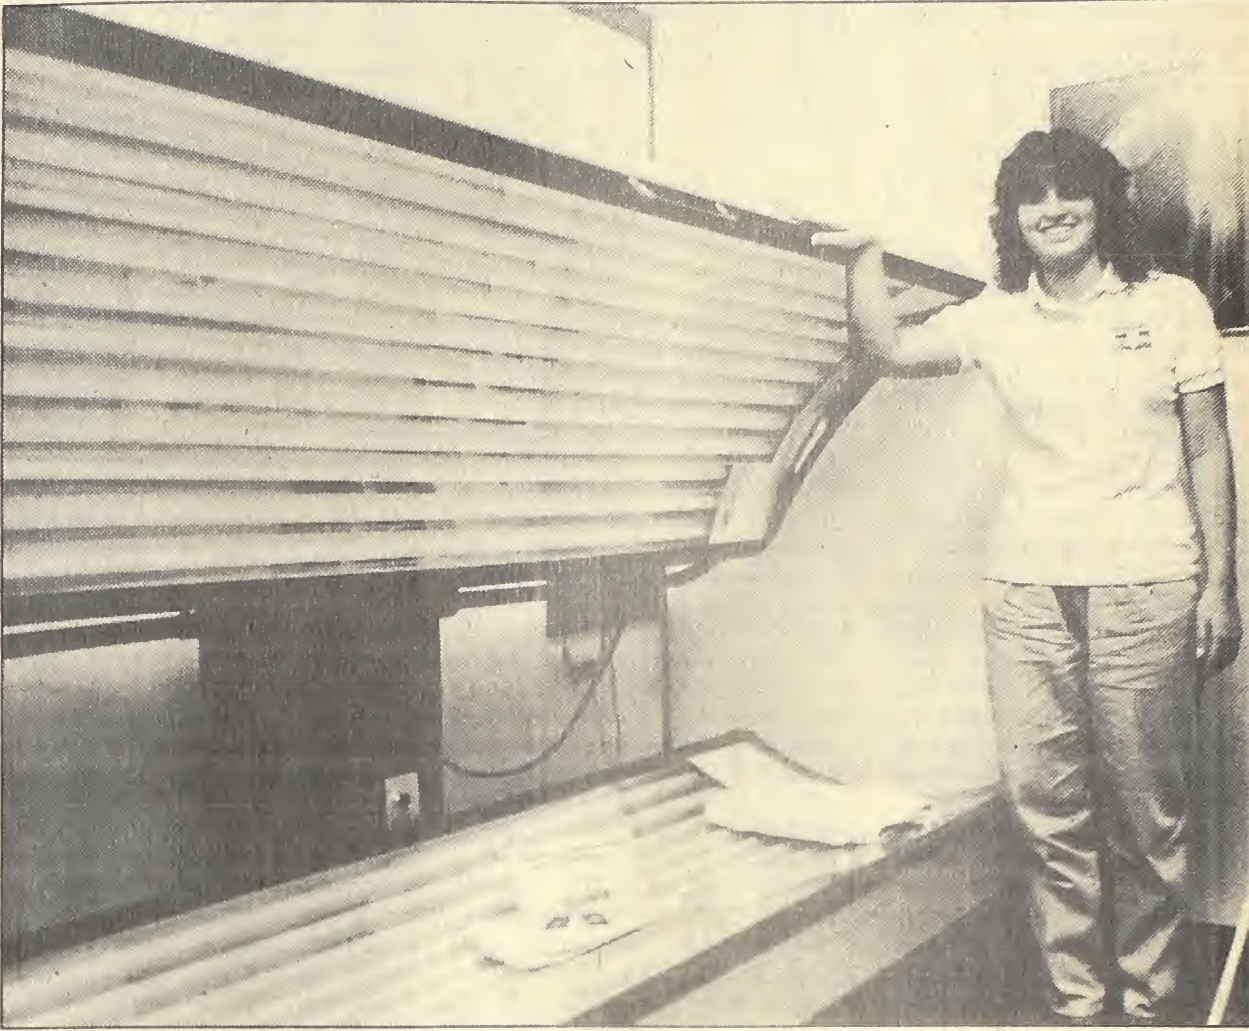

With the peak of a Detroit winter just behind, Riley said that this time of year is by far the busiest for her staff of six workers at the Ypsilanti spa.

"It varies with the time of year but this is a real busy season for us," Riley said. "People who are preparing for the summer, conditioning their skin or coming in because someone else went to Florida are coming in now. They just want to be tanned."

Riley reported that the tanning rush begins in December just before those few "lucky souls" begin the annual exodus to Florida and the hotter climates of the world. The desire to be brown continues until about the middle part of June, Riley continued.

The tanning spa owner went into the business after some extensive reading on the subject and on the effects tanning spas have on humans. After a long search for suitable machinery for her operation, Riley set out to tan the entire area.

The Fantastic Tanning Spa uses the Wolff System, a bed-like tanning machine that uses a

A fantanstic tan

To obtain that golden brown tan, Tanfastic customers recline in a bed covered with reflective material and sun bulbs. This method is safer and less prone to cause sun burn than the booth-type tanning businesses use, according to the owners, since only a limited amount of sun rays are released per minute.

blub and reflector to radiate two different ultraviolet rays. As Riley explained, it is the amount of these rays that each customer receives that determines how tanned and not red someone will become.

Riley explained that, like the sun, the Wolff tanning machine emits both "A" and "B" ultraviolet rays. The B rays bring the melanin pigmentation in human skin to the surface. At the same time, Riley continued, the A rays oxidize this pigment turning it a brownish color.

The key factor in determining whether the customer will receive a brown tan or a sunburn is in the amount of B rays he or she receives, according to Riley. The tanning spa owner said that the Wolff bed gives off 1 to 2 percent on the B rays per session. The sun, however, emits about 25 percent of B rays, an amount that Riley said was excessive and causes the skin pigmentation to burn.

The typical stay in the sunning bed, each one located in a private room at Tanfastic, varies from 10 to 30 minutes depending on the fairness of the skin and the number of previous visits.

"Each person starts out at approximately 10 minutes. Gradually they work up to 30 minutes in a bed," Riley said. "But, no one should go in for more than 30 minutes at a time."

For $40, customers at Tanfastic receive 180 minutes of "sunlight" spread out over seven to 10 visits. Sun bathers at the spa lie on the bed while a hood with the bulb and reflector cover the body. While sunning, Riley reported that spa visitors may listen to stereo radios or just relax.

As far as safety is concerned, Riley explained that the sun beds are better than direct sunlight since the atmosphere is constantly controlled and monitored and the amount of ultraviolet rays is constantly controlled. Nevertheless, the spa owner did admit that too much sun, whether from a spa bed, a tanning booth or direct sunlight, can cause premature aging and possible skin problems.

The tanning spa attracts both the young and old and people from all ethnic groups, according to Riley. While the younger, high-school crowd has been known to be frequent visitors to such businesses, Riley said that suntans are popular in every walk of life.

"I couldn't really say what kind of people come here. We have high school kids, we have professional people. Once people try this they come back," Riley said. "There's not a stereotypical person that comes in here."

Customers at the tanning spa are greeted by a staff of more than six workers to assist in making the atmosphere comfortable.

Even as she enjoys a booming business and an appointment book that is booked days in advance, Riley doesn't think that the traditional beach atmosphere with sunbathers will soon be extinct. She does feel, however, that tanning spas may be the answer to conditioning the skin before hitting the lake shores as well as giving the person who is short of time a chance to enjoy the social benefits of tanned skin.

"I don't think people are going to leave the beaches. I think people are starting to prepare themselves for the sun," Riley remarked. "The more people use this, the more they realize they have a lot more spare time than to lay out in the sun four or six hours."

"But they're not going to give up going to the beach. People go to the beach for other reasons too," she added.

Police officer gives crime tips

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

"Shoplifters steal from everyone" is the message that Canton Police Officer Ed Tanner brought to the Chamber of Commerce at the April meeting.

First, of course, they steal from the merchant, Tanner said. Second, they steal from employees of the store who may be denied raises or bonuses due to the theft. Third, they steal from every shopper who patronizes the store because prices for goods must be increased to compensate for the stolen merchandise.

Although television programs and films often depict the shoplifter as a kleptomaniac, Tanner said, very few shoplifters steal due to a compulsion. Instead, many are juveniles who take merchandise for thrills or status with their peers, and some are housewives or senior citizens who blame "high prices" as their reason for taking goods. Drug addicts and vagrants also account for some of the theft, Tanner said.

Shoplifting is big business for professional thieves, accounting for some $26-billion annually, Tanner said. These people may only enter a particular store one time, but they will come out with $500 or more of merchandise.

Professionals, the police officer said, often enter a store in pairs or groups. One individual may create a diversion by arguing with a sales clerk or faking illness while his or her accomplices steal the merchandise.

Tanner told the Canton businesspersons to be on the lookout for people wearing clothing that is "out of place." Bulky clothes or coats worn on a mild day may be used as places to conceal stolen goods. Professional thieves may use slings, belts with hooks, oversized purses or umbrellas to hide their take, he said.

The Canton officer warned businesspersons to watch for unusual gestures, persons who drop and pick up merchandise and also those who fold large items into small objects — all of which could be innocent habits or the mark of a professional thief.

Tanner recommended that stores adopt a firm policy of prosecuting shoplifters. That can be a deterrent when word gets around that the business is not lenient with lawbreakers, he said.

The officer also recommended employee involvement with training and team work emphasized. He suggested the use of one-way mirrors, lookout stations and such obvious methods as the limitation of exits, the locking of stockrooms and the checking of bundles and boxes.

Witnesses to accident sought

A Riverview resident whose car was damaged in an early Sunday morning accident is seeking the aid of anyone who may have seen the mishap on Michigan and Haggerty roads.

Naomi Spitler said she had left work at 3:30 a.m. and was crossing the intersection to enter the I-275 freeway when a red or orange car hit her Escort. Spitler said her car was hit on the right front side and then spun around.

She said the driver of the vehicle came to her and said he was sorry that he had hit her and claimed he did not see her.

She said he also told her that he was going to start up his vehicle to get it off the road and out of the way of traffic.

While Spitler waited in her car, the driver of the other vehicle started his car and left the scene without identifying himself or leaving any information with her.

Any witness to the accident is requested to call the Canton Police Department with information.

Catherine McAuley Health Center:

A Trusted Friend for 75 Years

Choosing a physician and a hospital is one of the most important decisions we can make. As a unit of Catherine McAuley Health Center, St. Joseph Mercy Hospital has been this community's trusted choice for the past 75 years. St. Joe's began here in 1911 at the request of local residents. Over 400 private physicians in more than 30 specialties rely on St. Joseph Mercy Hospital to provide what is best for their patients. Last year alone, 23,581 patients trusted both our physicians and our facility to give them quality, compassionate care.

The Trust of 3,500 Newborns and Their Families

Last year, approximately 3,000 women chose St. Joseph Mercy Hospital to deliver their more than 3,500 babies. They selected our Obstetrics Department because we focus on the whole family. We also give the new mother-to-be a wide range of options, from modern birthing beds to traditional birthing facilities. And while we are committed to making the birth of your child as natural as possible, our neonatologist and Special Care Nursery are always on call in the event of a complicated delivery.

Trusted by Surgeons and Their Patients

St. Joseph Mercy Hospital has experienced surgeons in all specialties. More than 16,000 surgeries were performed here last year—everything from minor outpatient surgery to the most demanding and complex inpatient procedures. St. Joseph Mercy Hospital started its Department of Surgery over 50 years ago. We believed then, and we believe now, that specialization leads to highest quality health care. These surgeons choose St. Joseph Mercy Hospital for their practice because of its tradition of providing excellent facilities and equipment along with professional and compassionate staff.

Blanchard signs Right-To-Know Bill

By RALPH WELTON
ANP Staff Writer

The right of Michigan workers to know what types of hazardous chemicals are present in their workplace is now mandated by law. It became official with the signing of a three-bill package by Gov. James Blanchard on April 7.

The bills (HB 4111, 5250 and 5251) had passed through the Michigan Senate without substantial amendment by votes of 33-2, 35-0 and 34-0. The only "no" votes were cast by Republican State Senators Ed Fredricks of West Olive and Jack Welborn of Kalamazoo.

HB 4111 was the core bill and allows for the workers' right-to-know. HB 5250 gives individual fire departments access to employer information concerning chemicals used and stored in their communities.

HB 5251 allows the public to gain information from the Department of Public Health concerning chemicals stored in their communities.

Under the new law, workers who are exposed to hazardous chemicals "in the normal course of employment" or "are likely to be exposed to hazardous chemicals in the event of an emergency" now have the right to information and training concerning the proper handling of the chemicals.

An employee also has the right to refuse to handle any unknown and unlabeled chemical container or a hazardous chemical for which there is no material safety data sheet (MSDS). Pipes in the workplace which carry hazardous chemicals must be identified to employees.

A federal right-to-know law which covers only manufacturing employees - about 25 percent of Michigan workers - begins May 25, 1986, but will be superceded by the Michigan law, which goes into effect Feb. 25, 1987.

The new law requires all employers to supply the local fire department with a list of hazardous chemicals in their workplace upon request. The fire department is then required to establish fire-fighting plans for each individual site. This will be done at local expense.

The community access portion of the law is a temporary measure due to expire on April 1, 1987.

Education, job skills attract youths to Army careers

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

Graduates who are facing an improving-but still tight-job market plus skyrocketing college costs are focusing their attention on the benefits for education and training offered in more than 350 Army career opportunities.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Ronald L. Poe, recruiter for the Wayne-Westland area, most of the young men and women who are seeking careers in the Army are attracted by the opportunity to learn marketable skills and to receive technical training plus the college benefits during and after service.

Poe notes that the recent trouble spots around the world have prompted patriotic motives for enlistment, but, by far, the training program of the Army attracts the most interest.

Staff Sgt. Terry Layne Lister emphasized that selections made by recruits are "legal binding contracts" and enlistees can be assured that when they make a career decision, it will be honored at enlistment.

Darrell Wagner, a graduating senior from John Glenn High School, signed up for Delayed Entry Program during his senior year and will leave for basic training in Fort Leonardwood, Mo., on July 1.

Wagner, whose father served in the Army, has had a long-time interest in enlisting, but did

"a lot of research and reading" before making his decision. Consequently, Wagner was informed about the Army programs-particularly, the pilot training-before he signed up.

"I've always wanted to earn pilot's wings," Wagner said, "and, the Army will give me to chance to do that."

Wagner, a member of the Civil Air Patrol, has taken some private flying lessons on his own, but the cost of pilot training would be prohibitive other than in the service.

"Travel opportunities and college benefits also helped me make the decision to join the Army," Wagner said, "but, the pilot training is really what I want."

Wagner got some tips on what to expect in basic training from a 1985 John Glenn graduate, Pvt. 2 Julie Hysko, who entered the reserve program after graduation.

She assured Wagner that basic training was not at all like that depicted in the movies and on television. The days go by so fast, she told him, that eight weeks seemed like two.

"The hardest thing I had to do in basic training was go to bed at 9 p.m.," Hysko said. "Of course, when you consider that we got up at 4:30 a.m., it's not so bad."

The most memorable part of her early training months, Hysko said, was the friendships she made.

"I met a variety of people from all aspects of life," she said. "Because we were away from our families, we became just like sisters and brothers. Now we write to each other and make plans to get together."

Hysko entered the reserve program for the college opportunities and training in the medical field. Her goal is to become a physical therapist. She left for her basic training on July 18 of last year and after her basic training, general medical orientation, school work and on-the-job training, she returned home at Christmas. Currently, she attends weekend meetings on a monthly basis and will go to Ft. Campbell, Ky., for two weeks of training this year. Next year she is looking forward to a trip to Holland with her reserve group.

Since her return, she has been working as a nurses' aid and will begin classes at Madonna College in the fall.

Sgt. John D. Justice pointed out that while the job market has improved in the area, most of the openings are in the fast-food area and other minimum-wage positions. There are few openings for the high school graduate where he or she can earn good wages and benefits. The Army, which is now geared to more technical skills, can provide some attractive positions for these graduates, he said.

A word of caution . . .

It is unfortunate that whenever there is a good deed done, there are opportunists who attempt to step in and use the positive actions of others for their own, sometimes questionable, benefit.

This is what happened last week following an article and accompanying editorial about the generosity of the Westland Police Officers' Association in funding an educational program aimed at halting the drinking and driving of graduating seniors. The patrolmen are funding the program at John Glenn and Wayne Memorial high schools out of their own money and are offering prizes for students who submit the top three posters and slogans in the anti-drinking and driving campaign. According to Richard Ringer, president of the WPOA, less than three hours after The Westland Eagle was on the streets, phone solicitors who claimed to be associated with the Westland patrolmen, began calling residents to ask for donations.

Mayor Charles Griffin reported that he received calls from irate citizens the following day informing him of the phone solicitations. Griffin, aware that the program is totally funded by the patrolmen, passed that information along to callers.

The Westland Police Department and the WPOA are not soliciting funds for Project Graduation and they warn citizens who receive calls from persons representing themselves as associated with Westland police officers and requesting funds for the anti-drinking and driving program that there is no authorized fund drive for this.

Unfortunately, this is not an isolated incident. Following an article about the Neighborhood Watch and Operation Identification program in Canton Township, there were phone solicitations from an organization claiming to raise funds for these worthy projects. Again, there was no authorized drive for public funds for these programs. In this case, the Canton projects were funded by the township.

The technique, we admit, is apparently an effective one for the questionable fund-raisers. They are hired by an organization to solicit funds and, in order to appeal to the public, they claim a worthy project as their own and solicit donations from the area with a barrage of phone calls - often from a "boiler room operation."

Using the name of the local police department seems to be a common technique. First, they assume that the residents will want to support a project that their own police department has endorsed and, secondly, there seems to be a "stamp of approval" of legitimacy on a project associated with the police department. In addition, there is a veiled threat that if one doesn't support the projects of the local police department, there may be some reprisals in the future.

We strongly advise residents to check into any organization or group that attempts to solicit money by phone. Ask the individual who calls for the full name of the organization for which he is soliciting funds and inform the caller that you will check the group out before making a donation. Information can be obtained from your local police department, chamber of commerce or the city or township hall. In addition, make it a practice to report any questionable solicitations so that others can be forewarned.

In addition, it is a good policy to check out any group or organization soliciting funds by mail or in person. There are many worthwhile charities and community fund-raisers that need our donations, and which will put our dimes and dollars to good use. On the other hand, there are opportunists who seek to line their own pockets and who pass little or nothing along to the charities they claim to represent. Let's not enrich them any further.

Cruelty has many faces

The measure of a society, many believe, is the manner in which the very young and very old are treated.

If that is truly the case, we wonder at the evaluation historians will place on American society today.

This week, in several of the areas we serve, investigations were launched, charges filed and complaints made to the office of the state attorney general regarding mistreatment of elderly patients in convalescent homes. While the electronic news media somewhat misrepresented the facts surrounding the complaints, the evidence would indicate that patients and residents of some nursing homes and convalescent centers are being treated in a manner which can most charitably be referred to as less than acceptable.

The very old and the very young have much in common. Their care and well being is usually in the hands of others who must take responsibility for providing for that nurturing. But while the young, as they grow, learn and mature, begin to be more easily reasoned with and able to communicate, the old, too often, become less and less mobile, alert and able to assume responsibility for themselves.

These people become dependent on families for care-and, families, usually busy trying to cope with the young, quite often must place the care of the elderly in "professional" hands. Doing that, they can attend to their own lives feeling that their older relatives are being cared for properly and in the best possible manner.

How sad that this appears not to be true. How ugly to think that many of our most senior citizens are left in these homes for months and sometimes years with not even a visit from a member of the family. New grandchildren and great-grandchildren are born, and never seen. Children age, and change, and yet parents placed "in a home" never see it happen. Familial contact is broken...because it's inconvenient, because quite often it's unpleasant, and because seeing the aged, we are reminded of our own mortality and of the debilitation age will bring to each of us.

A neglected senior citizen is every bit as sad a situation as an abused child. The total responsibility for the care of these once vital and active members of society cannot be left in the hands of those employed by facilities designed for them. Families cannot relegate their responsibilities totally. No center or home can assume that burden.

To abandon our aged, to not visit, to not investigate, to not call or remember birthdays or holidays is every bit as irresponsible and vicious as the physical attacks reportedly inflicted on these helpless victims.

We find the acts perpetrated on these citizens reprehensible, and would advocate the strongest punishment under the law for anyone proven to have poured water into the mouth of a

Board conduct angers citizen

To The Editor:

I was witness to a mockery of our democratic process on Thursday, April 10, 1986. The entire Huron Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools arrogantly walked out on a standing room only crowd of approximately 200 Huron Township residents. The board and superintendent left the room amid a flood of objections and questions from the audience. While a hurried motion of adjournment was being made, a board member, who is also a police officer in Huron Township, motioned for three policemen standing in back of the room to come forward. The police officers positioned themselves in a "GESTAPO" stance "protecting?" the board and allowing them passage out of the room.

This is another demonstration of the dictatorial methods being used by the Huron School District Board of Education and the administration. This board is not representative of the electors and is certainly no credit to this community.

A few short weeks ago, two board members walked out of a meeting; now the entire board. This community cannot allow a Board of Education who mocks our democratic way of life, to continue to make decisions that affect our children.

Why does this "administration" find it necessary to "intimidate" township voters with policemen inside a board room? Does this board find it necessary to arm itself against the very public who voted for the individual members? Can it be that this board is trying to prevent the voting public from exercising our constitutional rights?

Chinasized emotions

There's no place like home...that's an adage that can only properly be understood after being away from those things familiar which mean security and happiness.

And invariably, a long trip encompasses experiences which push all our emotional buttons. That's how it was with our recent travels. We laughed and we cried, we were angered, dismayed, amazed and delighted, quite often within the span of hours, but most of all we were educated. Our senses were constantly barraged with stimuli, both physical and mental. We encountered the sad, the unusual, the humorous, the ironic and the ridiculous, to label but a few of our situations.

If you've missed me recently, it's because my wife and I have been traveling. In the course of three weeks, we saw Washington, D.C., Los Angeles, Taiwan, Hawaii, L.A. (again) and finally, home. It was a grueling, hectic trip and we both now understand the full meaning of the term, jet-lag, but neither of us would trade our experiences for mere sleep.

In Taiwan we were in the company of 11 other American journalists, and visiting the country at the same time were about 30 other writers and editors from other parts of the world. While the majority of these other members of the fourth estate were, like us, from what is termed "print media," we struck up a fast friendship with Todd and Carol from the Public Broadcast Station in Topeka, Kansas.

While the rest of us were burdened with such heavy equipment as perhaps a pad and pen, and maybe a cigarette-package sized tape recorder, Todd and Carol came equipped with all the paraphernalia required to produce high-quality video tapes of broadcast caliber. We're not talking about super-eight movies or one of those portable video tape machines sold for home use, here. No, indeed.

What Carol and Todd found necessary to carry through the crowded (read mobbed) city streets in Tai Pai, Taiwan, was a 35 pound camera, tape deck, 50 pound battery belt, assorted lights, extension cords, large box of extra tapes, sound devices, etc. etc. etc. Now, Carol is extremely efficient and certainly no shrinking violet, but a number of men would have found the load she hauled throughout our trip taxing, to say the least.

But the day our "helpful" guide and the rest of us decided to walk 12 blocks from one assignment to the next was nearly the death of our television friends. Tai Pei has not yet heard of handicapped access, you see. So every curb required us to lift, lug, tug, push and grunt to get the video equipment, on carts, up onto the next very short sidewalk. After we had helped Todd and Carol for about the 700th time, this cross-continent excursion seemed less and less like a good idea.

It was then, I guess, that we decided to load all that equipment and ourselves into a cab and head back to the hotel.

This was an adventure.

Taiwan taxis are tiny. Not little, not small, not compact. Tiny. Drivers very rarely speak english. There are 30,000 taxi drivers in this metropolis (and only six rest stops to accomodate them, but that's another story) who all seem to have adopted the Japanese Kamakaze style of driving. They treat each fare as a mission from God and drive with single-minded purposefulness in completing their task, regardless of the other 29,999 cabs on the road. In short, they are prepared to die in the service of their cab company.

As Carol, Todd, Susan and I piled the trunk with video equipment and then attempted to squeeze ourselves into the cab, the resulting laughter at our own foibles was contagious enough to send even our driver into hysteria. Either that, or our attempts to tell him in Chinese where we wanted to go resulted in our divulging to him that Carol "had big feet" prompted his laughter.

But other things were not amusing . . . fascinating, perhaps, and sad. Our surreptitious trip to the "night market" where I saw a blind woman, legs folded, playing a crude, lute-like instrument. Dressed all in black, she sat and played while in front of her, lying on the ground was a child, perhaps 5 years old, sleeping. At her side was a clay pot, waiting for any act of kindness from passersby.

As we watched her and listened, a puppy wandering loose through the throng of sights and sounds came by. The pup stopped near the beggar, looked up at me and then pranced over to investigate the woman and her child. He searched her beggar's bowl for food with his nose, and finding none, scampered away.

How could that creature know that the jar contained the only means of acquiring sustenance the beggar and her child had? That is a sight that haunts me.

The night market is not to be found in guide books - and our government guide did his best to keep us from it. But, reporters are a devious breed. We found it, after a harrowing taxi ride which we knew would be our last. It is a narrow back street into which vendors crowd their stalls and carts with tiny side alleys which snake off into other, er, less reputable occupations. The alley, remarkably, ends at one of the most beautiful and significant buildings in the city - a Trappist Monastery, the oldest building on the island of Formosa.

Here, in the night market, is to be found just about anything and business doesn't really start until after 8 or 9 in the evening, when citizens are off work and have time to browse for "bargains."

There were so many other sights, sounds, tastes and smells we experienced in this culture completely foreign to ours. Perhaps we were most of all, fascinated by what we experienced and what we learned about the Chinese culture and ourselves.

But one thing became apparent above all others . . . There really is no place like home.

Cruelty

sleeping patient, or to have struck a resident with a basket...or to have mistreated an aged, ill old person in any way.

This physical mistreatment, however, is not the only cruelty inflicted on our older citizens. There is also the mental and psychological cruelty of unfeeling, uncaring families too busy or too preoccupied to spend the most precious of all commodities, time, with them.

Age is a part of life and the day of our birth is the first day we begin to travel toward that ultimate destiny. We should all keep in mind the history of those aged and often infirm residents in nursing homes and convalescent centers. While today they may be less than they were, they may not hear as well as they once did, they may not be quite as alert or quick. Age may have slowed their reflexes and time may have robbed them of the agility they once had.

But these are people. They are at the end of a cycle that unites us all, and they deserve the respect, consideration and veneration due those whose experience and knowledge exceeds our own.

It is a cycle...and it is inevitable.

Both the House and Senate have approved a bill to aid car buyers who find themselves with a new car that doesn't work right and can't be properly repaired. It is known as the "autolemon" bill.

Recognizing that there are occasions when the purchaser of a new vehicle is unable to get the defect or defects properly repaired, the bill spells out a method of resource to the consumer.

Under the legislation, an auto manufacturer and/or dealer would have four chances at satisfactorily repairing an initial defect. If the auto cannot be made right, the manufacturer would have the option of replacing the vehicle or refunding the customer's money.

The customer would have to be in agreement with the manufacturer on the method of compensation.

The legislation would put

Michigan in line with about 35 other states that have some type of "auto lemon" law.

Under the bill, if the owner of a new motor vehicle reports a substantial defect which impairs the car or truck's value within one year after delivery, or before the end of the warranty period if that is earlier, the manufacturer would have to attempt to correct the defect.

The manufacturer or its dealer would be allowed three attempts to repair the vehicle. If it still is not fixed to the owner's satisfac-

by state representative
jim kosteva

tion he or she would have to notify the manufacturer in writing of the continued defect. The manufacturer then would have the right to try one final repair.

If within 30 days of all repair procedures the car is still not properly fixed, the owner would get either a replacement vehicle or his or her purchase price refunded.

A replacement would have to be a comparable new vehicle currently in production.

The refund could include a reasonable deduction to allow for the consumer's use of the auto or any damages to the car.

The bill requires the consumer to make use of a manufacturer's informal dispute settlement procedure, but the consumer would not be required to accept any final decision from that process.

The defect in the vehicle would have to impair the use or value of the car, or prevent it from conforming to the manufacturer's warranty.

The bill covers cars, vans and pickup trucks used as passenger vehicles.

Living history

Kids recreate lives of the past

History came alive at Barth Elementary School when the fifth and sixth graders portrayed biographical characters from books they have read. They did this before a live audience in their school auditorium. And yes, history repeated itself.

Notables such as Orville and Wilbur Wright mingled with Joe Louis, Betsy Ross, Harriet Tubman, Benjamin Franklin, Abe Lincoln, Sojourner Truth and many more. There were 30 children participating in the "live diorama." Anne Oakley even sported a b.b. gun.

Charlotte Price is the reading teacher who organized this recreation of the past. This has been part of her program for almost 10 years.

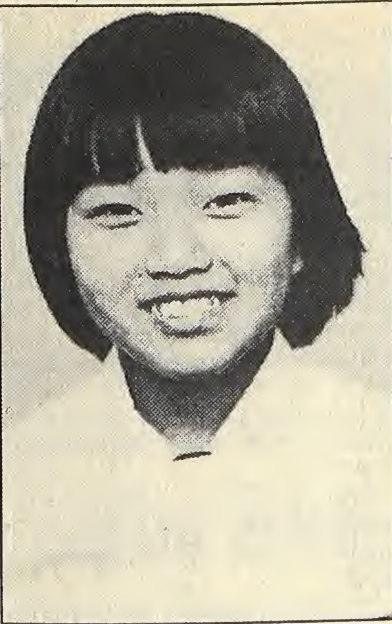

"The children were to read a biography about a person of their choice, then write and memorize a short speech about that person, she said. "And they dressed in costumes appropriate to the character."

"I hope that it would make reading more fun for the children. They really got into it. Some girls dressed as men and some white children portrayed famous black people," she added, pointing out that race or sex were unimportant when students chose their characters.

The event was scheduled April 10, in the school gymnasium. Parents, visitors and fellow schoolmates attended.

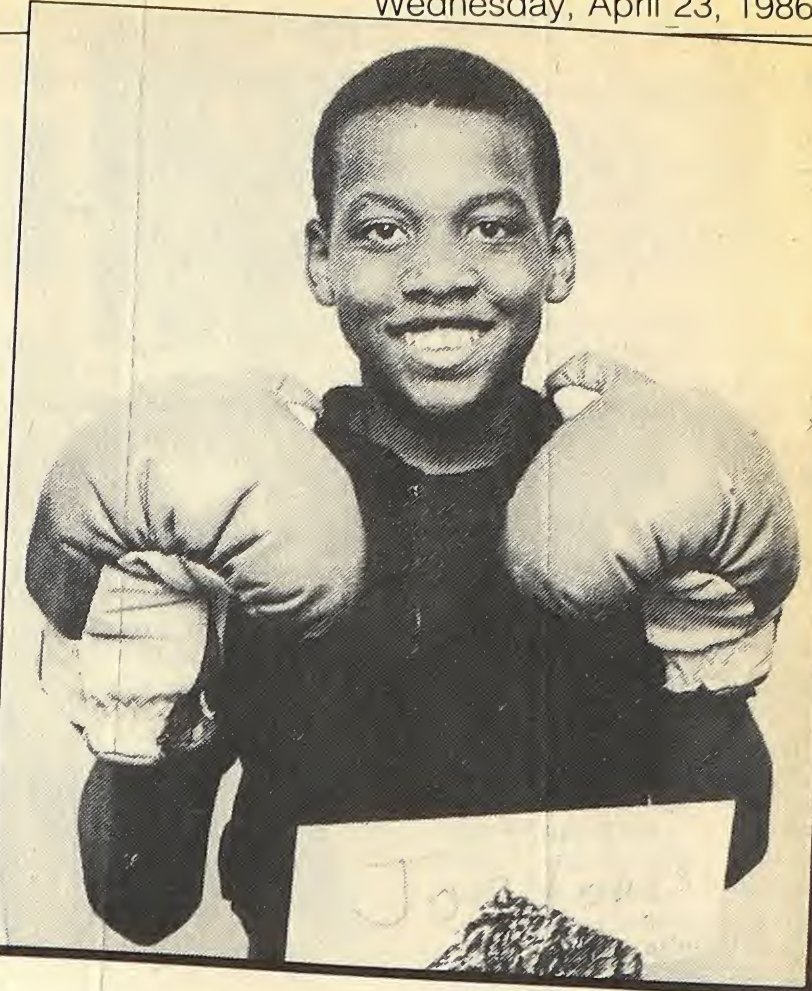

Mrs. Price has received several nice thank yous. "Some people said they not only enjoyed seeing the children but learned something themselves," she said.

Mrs. Price and her sixth grade homeroom have visited Greenfield Village and McGuffey School dressed in their

Susan Kreft as Orville Wright period costumes. "I just want to make as much as I can of this learning experience for them," said Price who began her college career when her children did. She has now taught for 14 years, and comments that she, "looks forward to it."

No doubt her students do as well.

Airline establishes first international link at Metro

On Monday, the two leading automotive centers of North America were historically linked by Skycraft Air Transport Inc. when they introduced the first ever Canadian scheduled passenger airline carrier to operate a regular service between Detroit and any Canadian airport began.

This provides an international linkage between the two leading automotive centers in North America.

Oshawa is the home of General Motors of Canada, also the largest company in Canada according to David Gould, public relations spokesperson for Skycraft in Oshawa.

stated Gould.

"The center is called the GM Autoplex and since 1980 over $4.2 billion has been invested making it one of the most modern auto manufacturing facilities in the world," he explained.

For passengers flying in from Detroit, the close proximity of Oshawa to both the new GM Autoplex, the Region of Durham, the fastest growing part of Ontario according to Gould, and metropolitan Toronto is understandably a major advantage.

Flight connections with both Canadian and American cities are easily available.

"Skycraft has had regularly scheduled flights since 1984. In their first year, they flew over 18,000 people on a fleet of 19 aircraft. Skycraft now operates 86 daily flights each week to and from Oshawa," said Gould.

Last week Skycraft inaugurated a special first flight between the two cities. Among those to greet the Skycraft crew were the Romulus Mayor Beverly McAnally. "This is an historic occasion to have an international flight between a Canadian city and Detroit. I was proud to welcome them on behalf of the residents of the City of Romulus," she said.

The mayor greeted several Canadian guests including: Cy Elsey, Executive Commissioner for the City of Oshawa Council; Noel Hutchinson, Director of Community Services Department, Parks Division; Bob Nicol, Director of the City of Oshawa Economic Development; Gary Harrema, Chairman of the Region of Durham; Cathy O'Flynn, President of Oshawa Chamber of Commerce and Elaine Elaine Minacs, Director of Durham Regions Manufacturer's Association. Other local notables included: Anthony Adams, executive assistant to the mayor of Detroit; Lillian Snyder, director of Detroit City Airport; Gil White, president of Greater Romulus Chamber of Commerce and George Kiba, world trade director for Detroit

Chamber of Commerce.

Greetings were also extended from the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premier of Ontario.

Skycraft's daily flights to Windsor will not be interrupted but the new service will allow travelers an airbridge over the Detroit River with easier access to the metropolitan area. Although tailored to the business individual, the service will provide all customers with morning and evening flights every weekday.

"This is an historic occasion to have an international flight between a Canadian city and Detroit. I was proud to welcome them on behalf of the residents of the City of Romulus."

dian airport.

Skycraft Air Transport, Inc. of Oshawa, Ontario will now commence weekday service between Oshawa Municipal Airport and Detroit Metropolitan Airport with two arriving and departing flights per day.

"General Motors has invested $2 billion to expand their Oshawa facilities. This is the largest single investment by a Canadian manufacturing company and will become the largest GM manufacturing complex in North America," Matauch as an All-Area performer at Wayne Memorial.

On the mat Matauch makes move at Michigan State

By JOHN KIBILKO
ANP Staff Writer

When Dan Matauch lost in the finals of the Michigan High School Wrestling Tournament in his senior year, there were more than a few people who thought that the better wrestler hadn't won. Don Haney, Matauch's coach at Wayne Memorial at the time, is one of those second guessers.

"He was definitely the better wrestler," Haney said of Matauch. "He just got caught late in the match. He should have won."

That loss, which came in the spring of 1983, was Matauch's first of his senior year and left him with a 50-1-1 record and a bitter taste in his mouth. Last month, Matauch took a major step towards eliminated that after taste.

Matauch, a Michigan State junior, finished seventh in the NCAA tournament at Iowa City, Iowa. His tournament performance earned him All-American honors and has followers talking of a possible national title next year.

"Danny's probably the best boy they have up there (at Michigan State)," Haney said. "I was blessed with some outstanding wrestlers that year (1982-83, when Wayne finished fifth in the state), and Danny is one of the best, if not the best, wrestler I've coached."

Matauch's mother, Edna, never doubted her son's abilities.

"I always knew he had the potential," Mrs. Matauch said. "And he was a walk-on, too. He had a couple of offers from other schools, but he wanted to go to State. The way he lost the state championship in his senior year—joyed this year. Despite his accolades, Matauch remains on the alert for a half-nelson from directions other than the wrestling mat.

"The competition is definitely better here than in high school," Matauch admitted. "That's the biggest difference. And the workouts (practices) are just as tough, if not tougher. We're weight-

'The way he lost the state title left a bitter taste . . . But I just knew he would make it at MSU.'

well, it just left a bitter taste. But I knew he'd make it at State."

Mrs. Matauch also said that Dan, who was attending Michigan State on a partial scholarship after making the wrestling team as a freshman, has now been awarded a full scholarship—part of the spoils which accompanies All-American status.

Matauch, who wrestled at 134 pounds last season, was level-headed about the success he en-lifting now that it's off-season."

But Matauch has concerns other than wrestling at East Lansing.

"Everything's a little bit harder because of classes," Matauch admitted. "That takes up a lot of time, and you have to do it."

So Matauch will hit the books and get himself ready for his senior year next season—hoping to avoid a takedown, either on the mat or in the classroom.

Rockets have a perfect week - they're 4-0 with sweep

Along came the seventh inning. First, Steve Irwin came out of the bullpen to quench a mild Hawk threat in the top half of the frame then Glenn responded.

With one out, Irwin walked and reached second on a sacrifice by Rick Tavormina but an error put the latter on base as well. Wells laid down a perfect bunt that went for a single and Glenn had the bases loaded. A passed ball allowed Irwin to score the winning run and Glenn was in high spirits.

Four days later, the Rockets unleashed a 9-0 attack on Livonia Stevenson for their second straight win. Irwin went all the way for the victory, scattering two hits and fanning 10 batters in the process.

Glenn scored two runs in the fourth on singles by Irwin and Wells, added four in the fifth keyed by a two-run double by Clint Straub, and three in the sixth, two on a double by Mike Hammontree.

"It's hard to tell after two games how the league will shape up," Hoenes said. "Harrison is a tough club and Stevenson is a little thin in pitching. Harrison has some great athletes."

Now it was Wayne's turn to visit Hoenes Field. Through the first two innings, Glenn was thwarted by pitcher Kevin Besco and the hitting of Ron Way, who clubbed a two-run inside-the-park homer in the first inning and a solo blast in the fifth.

But the Rockets started their comeback with two runs in the third. Tavormina's fielder's choice scored one run and Jim Kenyon's RBI single plated the other.

Glenn took the lead for good in the fourth as the Hammontree Brothers went to work. Chuck tripled in one run, then Mike hit his first varsity home run to give Glenn a 6-3 lead. The Rockets sent 13 men to the plate in the fifth, good for seven runs and a 13-5 lead. Straub, who went 4-for-4 in the contest, knocked in two with a single and Tavormina scored one with a single.

Wayne cut the final margin to 13-6 in the final frame on a single by Wayne, and a single by Eric Shirley.

In the second game, Wayne nearly took a page from Glenn's book overcoming a 6-1 deficit to take a 7-6 lead entering the final inning.

Glenn built that 6-1 lead in the third inning on Irwin's two-run double and Wilson's two-run single. But the Zebras picked away at the Glenn lead until they took the lead with four in the sixth.

Shirley and Keith Wenberg walked to start the rally, then an error scored one and Gary Scott laced a two-run single. Way (that man again) singled for another run before Mike Hammontree got out of a jam with a strikeout.

But nothing apparently stops these Rockets—Irwin led off the seventh with a single. Tavormina singled for a run, then Kenyon sacrificed with an error putting him aboard. Wilson walked and Rogala followed with a walk to force home Tavormina with the winning run and Glenn had completed a perfect week.

Meanwhile, the Junior Varsity Rockets won their first game of the season with a dramatic 4-3 extra-inning victory over Wayne Memorial on Saturday as Steve Zimmerla pitched the Rockets past their arch-rivals.

Tom Walker supplied the game-winning RBI.

Glenn gridders sign 'letters of intent'

Seven is a sometimes magic number in sports.

For the Rockets of Westland John Glenn, that number represents the quantity of players from last year's 9-1 Western Lakes Activities Association championship football squad who have committed themselves to play collegiate football next fall.

"Seven is the most players we have had committed in the school's history," said Chuck Gordon, Glenn coach.

The five newest recruits join Tony Boles, a 6-2 tailback who is headed for Michigan and 6-2 defensive tackle Don Croft who will play at Ferris State.

Chuck Hammontree, a receiver-defensive back who stands 5 feet, 11 inches and is remembered for his decisive catch that turned the tide and gave the Rockets a 7-0 victory over nemesis North Farmington. He'll join teammate Rick Hassen (6-5, 205) at Saginaw Valley State.

Hassen, a tight end, caught five touchdown passes to tie a school record.

Hammontree and Hassen will join former Rockets Chris Piazza and Rick Wilson at Saginaw.

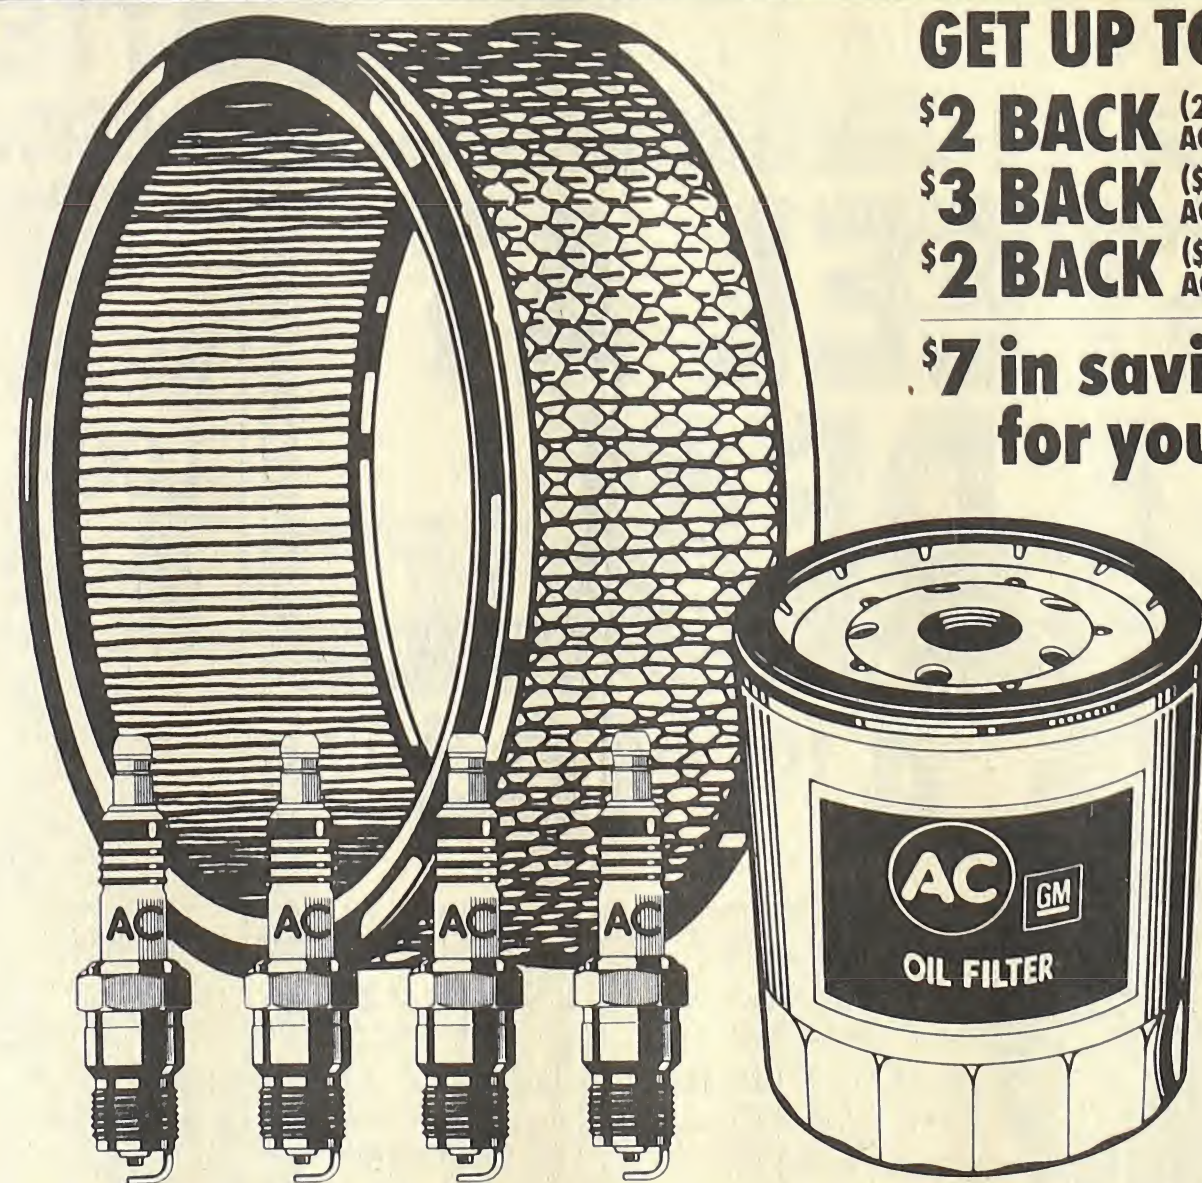

Rick McCurdy, a 6-0, 205-pound linebacker who also played in the Rockets "elephant man" backfield, has committed his talents to Albion College.

McCurdy will join former Rocket Dan Strehl there.

Center Pomorski, who anchored Glenn's offensive line the last two years, is headed to Adrian College next fall. The 5-11 center was an All-WLAA selection and All-Area performer for the Rockets.

Speedy defensive back Bill Grisamer, whose 80-yard kickoff return and 81-yard interception return for touchdowns are both Glenn records, will be attending Northwood Institute next fall.

Dave Orner of Canton (far left), Jeff James of Westland, Mary Jo Cabello of Canton, William Stewart and Helen DeJulio of Westland (far right) catch Kevin J. Kozlowski of Westland "laying down" on the job in the play, "No Sex Please, We're British."

Audiences vote positive 'yes' as 'No Sex' plays final weekend

(The following review was submitted by Russ Ogden, professor at Eastern Michigan University)

"No Sex Please, We're British" closes a mixed season of the Spotlight Players dramatic offerings. Stars of the two-act comedy had to be co-authors Anthony Marriott and Alistair Foot.

Living above a bank where he works, newlyweds Peter and Frances Hunter, played by Tobin Alan Hissong and Mary Jo Cabello, are descended upon by his mother, Eleanor (Helen DeJulio) who comes for an extended, uninvited visit. Fellow employee and close friend of Peter is Brian Runcicles (Kevin Kozlowski) who shares in their madcap shenanigans.

Frances has ordered a shipment of innocent merchandise from a Swedish company which turns out to be pornographic photographs, followed later by pornographic movies. Their attempt to hide and dispose of the unwanted items during the evening leads to the pleasant audience enjoyment as Leslie Bromhead (Marvin Nochman) as an officer of the bank dates Peter's mother and Mr. Needham (William Stewart) arrives early to inspect the books, only to become a part of the merriment at the overcrowded apartment. Lorraine Parent and Doreen Deschamps as two ladies of the evening add their special characterizations to this two-act romp.

The play itself is almost a sure thing to bring laughs! The Spotlight Players, however, were up and down all evening in their performances, in their "British" language interpretations and in their timing.

The most solid "in character" performance for the evening was by Helen DeJulio. Jeffrey James as Superintendent Paul of the police department was impressionable and Marvin Nochman was particularly outstanding.

Performances continue for this audience pleasing comedy at 8 p.m. on April 25 and 26 at John Glenn High School, Westland.

Train show to chug into Plymouth Center

More than 100 tables of antique trains and operating layouts will be on display between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. April 27 at the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer, Plymouth.

The event, which is sponsored by Plymouth Yard Hobbies of 904 Starkweather, is the fifth bi-annual Plymouth Train Show. The series of shows offers an opportunity for hobbyists to buy, sell and trade equipment and for visitors to view a variety of new, used and antique trains.

Visitors can climb aboard a Chessie System locomotive and caboose which will be parked at the now-closed roundhouse which is located on the side track of the C&O main line.

Plymouth Yard Hobbies is located in the historic C&O Freight Station which was built in 1880. During the show day, the shop will have a 25 percent off sale on everything in their stock.

Active in the Bluewater

Michigan Chapter of the National Railway Historical Society, the hobby shop owners also are ticket agents for passenger excursion rides. The society is a non-profit organization that raises money for the preservation of railroad history.

Prizes await mother of year

Everyone's Mom is special, but only one extra-special mother will be the recipient of $150 worth of gift certificates and the honor of being named "Mother of the Year" in a contest sponsored by Associated Newspapers.

Youngsters and adult children alike may submit a letter stating in 100 words or less why they believe their mother should be honored as the 1986 Mother of the Year. Nominations will be accepted for mothers who live within the circulation area of the six Associated Newspapers - The Wayne Eagle, The Westland Eagle, The Canton Eagle, The Inkster Ledger-Star, The Belleville Enterprise and The Romulus Roman. The entry should include the name, address and phone number of the nominee and must be received at Associated Newspapers, P.O. Box 578, Wayne, Mich. 48184, on or before May 1. Winners will be announced in the May 7 edition and the gift certificates will be presented at that time.

The honoree will receive a $50 gift certificate to treat her family to a dinner at Molly McQuire's Restaurant, 34200 Ford Road, Westland; a $50 gift certificate for a new outfit at Stuart's Apparel, 35136 Michigan Ave., Wayne, and a $50 worth of beauty services from Sadie's Beauty Salon, 3131 South Wayne Road, Wayne.

Five runners-up also will be honored.

Co-ed

Shawn Renee Reinwand, 15, of Westland is a state finalist in the Miss Michigan American Co-Ed Pageant to be held on May 2 through 4 at the Plymouth Hilton Inn.

'Opal' opens Friday in Plymouth

"Everyone Loves Opal" will be staged at 8 p.m. May 2, 3, 9 and 10 at the Plymouth Central Middle School, 650 Church Street, Plymouth.

Cast in the title role of Opal is Karen Wendt. Michael Gresock of Canton portrays Solomon Bozo, the role created by Stubby Kaye in the original production, and John Talaske of Westland is cast as Joe, the policeman.

The cast also includes Rick

Canton girl is runner-up

Karen Groff of Canton has been named as a runner-up in a national contest which attracted more than 4,200 entrants.

Karen, 16, the daughter of Geraldine and John Groff, is a pom pon girl and enjoys skiing and basketball. She models for the John Casablancas Agency.

To enter the contest, teens submitted photographs and were judged in competition with other contestants on the basis of the photos. Three national finalists, 50 state winners and 150 national runners-up were honored in the 1986 Miss Love's Baby Soft contest.

Opal, played by Karen Wendt, is "written up" by Plymouth Officer Skoggins for a traffic violation involving her red wagon. "Everybody Loves Opal" will be staged on May 2, 3, 9 and 10.

Not working '9 to 5'

Secretaries disband old image

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Although the famed movie "9 to 5" somewhat blew the lid off the traditional belief that secretaries were "yes women" who know only how to type, take dictation and pour coffee, many secretaries today share the belief that the once untalked about profession has gained national recognition.

In celebration of National Secretaries Week April 21 through 25 and National Secretaries Day today, many area secretaries are rolling away from their desks to shimmer in the added recognition as they dine with their bosses and eagerly accepted the rave reviews.

DORIS KELLY, secretary to Canton Township Clerk Linda Chuhnan, said that she enjoys her position because of the wealth of knowledge she must acquire and because of her particular admiration for dealing with the public.

An employee of the township since 1969 and once employed in the Water Department, Kelly has served as the clerk's secretary for the past two administrations. Although the expansionary picture of the area has now expanded her workload, Kelly feels that such a job provides her with first-hand news of municipal events.

"I like the variety and the public contact I have here. I like working with people," said Kelly.

In her role as a secretary, Kelly performs the usual tasks of typing, taking dictation and making coffee. And, incidentally, the secretary reported, such a duty doesn't cause Kelly to feel inferior.

"If you have to go and fetch a cup of coffee - that's no problem."

And if the boss is unavailable, Kelly would never lie, because as she explained, she never has to.

"If my boss is indisposed, it's

Karen Szymula, a veteran secretary at the Inkster City Halls, feels the current recognition of people in her profession is just. According to Szymula, a secretary can make or break even the best bosses.

the truth," Kelly said.

Although not an proponent of the women's liberation movement, Kelly was optimistic about the changing reaction to secretaries in society. However, the secretary admitted that some secretaries salaries should "be more on par with the men."

KAREN SZYMULA, administrative secretary to Inkster City Manager Gregory Knowles and public service and information officer, attributed her tenure in the position to her ability to deal with the public and many times help solve public concerns.

In the position since 1968 and having sustained five different city managers and three interim officials, Szymula feels she can effectively rate her position and the benefits of it.

Her first day of work was perhaps the most memorable, Szymula reported, and it even might be considered the most scary.

"On my first day on the job the Inkster Police Officers' Association went out on strike. It was the only strike they ever had," Szymula said. "(The city manager) gave me a legal-size pad and told me to walk across the street to the police department and have all the officers who were out there to sign it.

"They all signed but it was really tough. My father and grandfather were officers in Detroit," she added. "I'll never forget some of them there and young little me."

Crossing the picket line wasn't the only memory that comes to mind for Szymula, however. The secretary reported that one apparently irate gentleman came into the city manager's office just hours after a Detroit rainstorm had raised the level of the Rouge River which runs through the middle of Inkster.

"A guy had caught a rat (from the river) and he threw it on my desk. I just smiled and said, 'You have a problem. Can I help you?'" Szymula remembered.

Nevertheless, the frequent public contact hasn't been a problem for the city-hall worker. In fact, Szymula reported that it's this interaction and ability to provide help that has kept her on the job for the more than 18 years.

"I like helping the citizens. When they come in with the problems and working with the manager. (The city manager) and I can read each others' mind. It's really good for a secretary to be able to read her boss. That can really help him," Szymula remarked.

And although she doesn't relish the thought of making coffee, and no longer has to do so since her new boss doesn't drink the concoction, Szymula feels the national recognition of secretaries comes at a good time. And besides, she added, she gets to go out to lunch with the boss.

"I think secretaries are gaining credibility more and more. Now you here that a secretary can make or break a boss," Szymula said. "Just telephone messages alone - back and forth - can make or break a boss.

"But it's not just an answer-the-phone job anymore."

Keeping the secretary happy

Although the origin of the piece is unknown, "Rules To Follow When Dictating" has circulated around many office settings and has provided a chuckle or two for the perhaps less-than-happy secretary. Here are a few of the best tips a boss can take down:

- Never start first thing in the morning. Secretaries prefer a terrific rush in the late afternoon and love to work far into the night and are only too thankful for somewhere to spend the evening.
- Smoke or chew gum while dictating. Is assists pronunuciation. If you're a non-smoker, crunching peanut brittle or some similar confection is recommended.
- Please lower the voice in the dictaphone when dictating names of people, places, etc., and under no circumstances spell them, expect of course names like Smith or Jones.

• Some dictators may prefer the following method: Spell every name (especially Smith or Jones) not only on the first time but every time it appears. If anything mentioned in the dictation requires caps, don't give a simple instruction to this effect the first time it appears but repeat it each time as follows:

"The Board (capital B) of Directors (capital D) authorized the Certificate (capital C) of Amendment (capital A). The Certificate (capital C) of Amendment (capital A) was to change the name of the Company (capital C). The Board (capital B) of Directors (capital D) approved the form of the Certificate (capital C) of Amendment (capital A).

• When dictating a document containing a quotation, try to omit stating either when the quote starts or finishes. Nothing pleases a secretary more than to hear "End quote."

• And finally, if you are writing a document in longhand, please write with a crayon held in the left hand (right hand if left-handed), while blindfolded. Incorrect spelling, balloons, arrows or diagrams should be scribbled sideways, upside down or any way you can. Even if only three words are left from a typed page, by no means write the new material on a new sheet of paper.

Sandra Stefaniak is wed

Wearing her mother's bridal gown and carrying a bouquet of roses, stephonotis, ivy and heather, Sandra Lee Stefaniak of Westland recently became the bride of Kyle Colvin of Rankin, Mich., in a double-ring ceremony on Jan. 18, 1986.

Escorted down the aisle of St. Matthew Lutheran Church by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Stefaniak of Westland, the bride wore the satin chapel-length gown with a veil re-designed with ivory illusion netting and lace onto a satin and pearl cap worn by her mother in her wedding in 1952.

Both bride and groom are graduates of Michigan Technological University in Houghton.

The ceremony, conducted by Rev. Ralph Fischer, was witnessed by more than 200 guests. The church was decorated with altar flowers and a special rose in the memory of the groom's mother, the late Reba Colvin. The reception was hosted at Sts. Peter and Paul Romanian Church.

Both mothers of the couple chose light blue gowns for the special occasion. Matron of honor for the evening, Cheri Peacock of Watersmeet, Mich., wore a winter blue gown and carried a bouquet of carnations and roses. Bridesmaids Sandy Meis of Westland and

Mr. and Mrs. Kyle Colvin

Sherri Sandri of St. Charles, Mo., sister of the bride, wore winter blue gowns of the same style and carried carnations and roses. All attendants for the bride wore carnations in their hair.

Best man for the evening was Edward Doyle of Rankin. Groomsmen were Mark Colvin, brother of the groom, and Stephen Stefaniak of Cookesville, Tenn., brother of the bride. Ushers were Alex Nemethy of Salem, N.H., and David Sandri of St. Charles, Mo., brother-in-law of the bride.

The newlyweds honeymooned in the Pocono Mountains before settling in their new home in Plymouth, Minn.

CUSTOMER ISN'T ALWAYS RIGHT

Dear Letter Writer:

My landscape company recently did a job for a renter in a house owned by someone else. The owner of the house is very upset with us and sent us an angry letter indicating that she would "... proceed with legal action ..." and copies of this letter will be sent to the Better Business Bureau, Internal Revenue Service-Investigation of Business Practices and (her attorney)," if we did not replace the lawn. Our representative never spoke to her and was doing business with the tenant. Would you please help me explain this to her together with all of the other details.

Sincerely, MC

Dear Homeowner:

I am in receipt of your letter of July 22, 1985. It is important to note that your letter was addressed to an employee of our company who was in no way involved in the referenced transaction. I am the owner and, as such, have opted to extend you the courtesy of responding to you personally. I do not, nor have I or my company ever, entered into any type of contractual relationship with you.

On or about June, 1984, your tenant, a long-time acquaintance of mine, contacted me and requested that I sod his lawn. After viewing the property, I presented to him an estimate ($475.00) which included soil preparation (top soil), stripping and sodding the lawn. He indicated to me that he had received quotes for $375 from other contractors; that he simply wanted the lawn sodded; and that he did not want to spend the additional money. Thus, we performed the job as requested by the customer.

On numerous occasions, I clearly explained to the tenants how their new lawn must be maintained, i.e. watering schedules and mowing lengths. I have seen the tenants, almost daily, and have viewed the property at issue many, many times over the past year. During our conversations, I informed the tenants that they were not following my lawn maintenance instructions. On two occasions, I, in good faith, and without charge, fertilized the lawn and re-instructed them on maintenance.

I appreciate your position as the homeowner of this property and I will certainly react to whatever legal or other action you may choose to take.

Sincerely, MC

COMMENTS:

The homeowner's dispute was with the tenant and not with the landscaping company. After receipt of this letter, MC informed me, by telephone, on April 9, 1986, that he and the homeowner had several conversations resulting in the homeowner ultimately taking no action. Again, if, in fact, the lawn was ruined, the homeowner's remedy under the law was probably small claims court with the tenant and her defendant.

Clarification

A story last week should have said that Emma Weiland of Wayne has lived to preceed the death of her husband and five of her six children.

A headline last week should have said that Pat Birbeck is the manager of Bud's TV in Belleville and not the owner.

2. In Memoriam
In memory of our beautiful daughter
Sally Leona Lang

who passed away 1 year ago April 24th. We miss you more and more as the days go by, you are truly not forgotten. The time we share together on this earth was wonderful and we wouldn't have missed it for the world. Until we meet again, remember:
"WE LOVE YOU IN NEVER ENDING BIG WHOLE BUNCHES"

Mom, Dad, Mike, Debbie, Erin, Sarah, Brian, Rick, Cindy, Jason, Cheri, Richard, Kelly, Gene, Al, Leanna, Cindy, and Scott.
5. Personals
Pam: My little scheme worked and I'm so proud!
You're no longer able to hide out in St. Mary's large crowd. The color on your face when I called your name, was almost equal to your carred as flame.
The lesson on Sunday is easy now, hear me as I say;
Mess around with this guy, friend, and you're really asking to pay.
So don't take this personally, don't cry and feel blue;
'cause Jan, Jerry, Jim & Tom may all be victims too.
Amen.
